

Brothers Under the Sun

Music and Lyrics by James R. Howard

I woke this morning, I went outside
And looked into the morning sky
And I wondered, just who I am
And what would become of my life
And I pondered, thought thru my life in vain
Just what have I lost, and what have I gained

Who do I have to love, Until...
Until my weary bones grow old
And what will I have to give, to a world
A world that has grown cold
To the needs of friends, Brothers Under the Sun
Tell me who has lost, and who has won

(Chorus 1)

Why can't we remember in times of past
It wasn't so long ago
When we gave a helping hand
To people, people that we didn't know
When smiles would shine, on faces everywhere
And hearts were full of love and joy to spare

The world is starving, starving for a love
It hasn't been seen in years
It's full of pain, full of hate
Fueled by man's own despair
And the children cry, for the light to outshine the dark
The answer is plain still not in our hearts

[interlude]

(Chorus 2)

Remember the joy, of helping...
Helping a friend in need
Or holding the hand of a young child
As you helped him cross the street
And it hurts me to think, I was included in the crowd
That lost sight of love in life somehow

Brothers under the sun
We're all brothers under the sun
Love your brother
